

OCRL's Guiding Philosophy

Living, studying, and working within a rigorous academic community prompt and require responses to a host of profound questions.

Within the immediate environs of the University and beyond, OCRL seeks to create spaces and opportunities where such questions can be voiced and explored openly, whether these concerns originate within religious, philosophical, ethical, or spiritual practice.

In addition, OCRL works to increase religious literacy within the Brown community. The office supports religious diversity and promotes more nuanced knowledge of and acquaintance with religious practice and topics. It dives deeply into the complexity of religious identity through interfaith dialogue, multifaith collaborations, and other service beyond the Van Wickle Gates.

Furthermore, OCRL's work is rooted in the care of the whole person—body, soul, and spirit. As such, a core mission of every chaplain is to solve problems, ease discomfort, function as a quasi-ombudsperson for faculty, staff, students and alumni/ae, and to make available pastoral care and advisement for any member of the Brown community. This happens through activities such as academic intervention and oversight of projects, individual counsel, programming on critical spiritual themes or concerns, and presiding at key life rituals. Thus, the composite of the chaplains' work in this area includes care for many hundreds at Brown.
