Centex proved to be another endurance test, and although we had more success at the tournament this year than last, there were games that slipped through our hands. There were points that were well-executed, and points with lapses. Brownian Motion went 1-4 on Saturday and rebounded with a 2-1 showing on Sunday.

The third game on Saturday pitted B-Mo against the top seed in our pool, Georgia, winner of the Stanford Invite. B-Mo jumped out to a 7-5 halftime lead, but had trouble putting together two strong halves and lost 13-9. The win Saturday was against East rival Pittsburgh on universe point. By the final game of the day against Texas A&M, some players were cramping or injured (due to long games and stiff competition). B-Mo fought hard, but wound up with a tough two-point loss. Sunday featured wins over California and Davidson, with a tough loss on universe point to North Texas.

B-Mo finally hit the grass on Tuesday with the start of weekly outdoor practices. As long as the snow and cold weather stays away, look for B-Mo to come together and start their ramp up to Regionals and Nationals. Actually, even if it does snow or rain, B-Mo will still be bringin' it to practice! This upcoming weekend, B-Mo will be jumping across state lines to play in the annual Yale Cup tournament, which is also the Ivy League Championship!

Thoughts on this season:

This year we have such a perfect balance with a core group of veterans who have experienced greatness, a seasoned sophomore class fighting to make their names, and a talented and quick learning group of rookies. Unlike recent years, we have the unique ability to both be extremely successful at Nationals this year and to establish a foundation for continued improvement in the next few years.

Why will BMO succeed this Spring 2007?

Because we outwork teams. Poor execution hurt us in the early season, but as we continue to cut down on turnovers and poor decisions, our greater effort throughout tournaments will be the difference.
