"We got going Saturday by putting up an early lead on the home team, and with several great D's from Ian "Sky Ripper" Simms, we effectively put the Steak in Salisbury (pun intended)."

—Captain Ben Saper '07

Despite horrendous playing fields and wicked windy afternoons, BMO improved this weekend, especially with our zone offense and zone defense. While playing in the championship game is commendable, BMO still needs to complete an entire game both on the field and on the sidelines. It's evident that playing as one unit will be essential to improvement and reaching our full potential as a team. This weekend's Centex tourney is very competitive and will be an indicator of BMO's future competition.

Special thanks to the Fetting-Smiths:

You absolutely took amazing care of us this weekend, from all of the great tournament food and drinks you brought us, to a special Baltimore-style feast on Saturday night, to cheering us loud and proud the entire weekend. We really loved all the support! See you soon!

Thoughts on this season:

It's going to be great. I was out last spring with a broken ankle, so I've watched a huge amount of Brown Ultimate, and I'm really ready to play some more. We are a much more experienced team now, and so we can set our sights much higher. Beating Stanford – the # 1 seed – at their own tournament shows that we can beat anyone when we play well. If we string together some great games, we will go far. Why will BMO succeed this Spring 2007? We are stronger than we were last year in pretty much every way—superstars in the upper class, and sophomores who've figured their stuff out, becoming real college elite players, and a strong group of freshmen, some of whom already have the kind of throws that make me jealous...and I love it!
