

BROWN UNIVERSITY
THE EXPOSITORY WRITING PROGRAM
IN THE DEPARTMENT OF ENGLISH PRESENTS

JAY ALLISON

INDEPENDENT BROADCAST JOURNALIST

"This I Believe and the Art of Citizen Storytelling"

MONDAY, NOVEMBER 20, 2006

7:00 PM

SMITH BUONANNO, ROOM 106
PEMBROKE CAMPUS

(SET BACK FROM THE INTERSECTION OF BROWN AND MEETING STREETS)

BOOK SIGNING TO FOLLOW
OF THIS I BELIEVE, A COLLECTION OF PIECES
FROM HIS RADIO PROGRAM

Jay Allison hosts and produces National Public Radio's This I Believe, a series of statements of personal belief from prominent people and everyday citizens, a revival of the 1950s series of the same name, hosted by Edward R. Murrow. His work airs on programs like All Things Considered, Morning Edition, and This American Life.

Allison has received several national awards for broadcast journalism. He is also the recipient of the Public Radio News Directors' annual award for "lasting commitment to public radio journalism" and the Corporation for Public Broadcasting's annual Edward R. Murrow Award for "outstanding contributions to public radio," the industry's highest honor. In the long history of the annual award, he is the only independent producer to have received it.

CO-SPONSORED BY THE DEPARTMENTS OF MODERN CULTURE & MEDIA AND VISUAL ARTS AND BY A SALOMON GRANT FROM THE DEAN OF THE COLLEGE.