

The Fourth R: Recycling in Public Schools

Working Toward Second Nature

by

Judith Rubin

Thesis

Submitted in partial fulfillment of the requirements for the Degree of Bachelor of Arts in the Center for Environmental Studies at Brown University

May 1989

CONTENTS

Acknowledgements	iii
Chapter I: Introduction	2
Chapter II: Action-oriented, Integrated Approach to Environmental Education.	7
Goals of environmental education.	7
Approaches to environmental learning	10
Vicarious experience	11
Extra curricular programs	12
Integration of environmental themes into traditional courses	13
In the high-tech school yard	16
Chapter III: The Trouble With Voluntary Recycling Programs	20
Incentives	20
Money-raising myth	22
Some problems	22
Importing the problem	23
Summary of problems and suggestions	24
Chapter IV: Untangling The Legal Requirement	26
The case of Cranston, RI	30
Chapter V: Just What Can a Recycling Program Teach?	32
Individual connection to environment	33
Teaching a mass-balance perspective	34
Respect for non-human organisms	35
Chapter VI: A Sample Project	37
The four-week special project	37
Science: one starting point	37
Art	40
History	41
Math	42

Throughout the schoolyear	43
Science	43
History	43
Art	45
English	45
Math	46
A comparison of short-and long-term projects	46
Chapter VII: Taking Action	49
The in-schools recycling coordinator	49
Conclusion	52
Chapter VIII:	Bibliography
	53