

Dedication of the Feminist Theory Papers

February 5, 2010

The Feminist Theory Papers is an archival collection of the papers of scholars who have changed the intellectual landscape of universities in the United States and internationally. Established by the Pembroke Center in partnership with the Brown University Library, the collection offers a rare perspective on the rigorous interdisciplinary work that brought feminism to the vanguard of academic research. In the last thirty years, feminist thinkers have examined and challenged entrenched patterns of thinking by articulating questions of difference and identity and by exploring the complexities of cultural practice. These same scholars have also been responsible for profound intellectual changes not limited to feminist theory. Just as the Pembroke Center's influence on the academy over the last three decades has in no way been limited to explicitly feminist work, so are the papers in this collection of far-ranging importance.

The collection now houses the papers of Teresa Brennan, Karen Brodtkin, Anne Fausto-Sterling, Nancy Hartsock, Elaine Marks, Naomi Schor, and Louise Tilly. Each collection contains a unique set of documents representing that scholar's contributions to feminist theory as well as to her discipline and, in some cases, to political work and institution building. Examples of documents include correspondence, research notes, manuscript drafts, syllabi, and other relevant materials.

The list on the reverse side includes the names of scholars who, as of February 1, have signed letters of intent to donate their papers in the future. Today we celebrate the Feminist Theory Papers collection, the many scholars who are participating in the project, and those who will join the list in the future.
