PROFESSIONAL AND RESEARCH EXPERIENCE

Ghana Population and Environment Project, Brown University and University of Cape Coast, Ghana

Survey Manager, 2004

Managed fieldwork in coastal Ghana for Michael J. White's NIH-funded project investigating linkages between population change, environmental processes, and human health. Developed survey instruments and protocols; trained survey team leaders, interviewers, and focus group leaders; organized sampling procedure; supervised field census; and managed survey, water sample collection and analysis, questionnaire editing, and data entry.

Research Practicum, 2004

Collaborated with Michael White and other project participants to analyze data and wrote a paper examining migration patterns and determinants in coastal Ghana using event history models.

The National Academies: Committee on Population, National Research Council, Washington, DC Program Officer, 2001-2003

Directed the activities of the Roundtable on the Demography of Forced Migration and assisted with the direction of the activities of the Panel on Urban Population Dynamics, co-editing panel volume Cities Transformed.

Research Associate, 1998-2001

Research Assistant, 1997-1998

Conducted background research for studies on a variety of international population issues. Edited a volume of papers on forced migration and mortality and helped draft grant proposals and reports. Organized workshops and meetings; wrote meeting reports, supervised intern research.
