Empowering Your Future is a one day conference for middle school girls and their parents and teachers. The conference exposes girls to science in a fun and educational environment. Various student sessions are offered to showcase real life applications of math and science. The conference also features special information sessions for parents and accompanying adults, focusing on helping girls with study skills, and on financial aid and other college-preparatory concerns. This is an excellent opportunity for girls and their parents or accompanying adults to find out more about the possibilities that science, math, and engineering offer.

Attendance at the conference costs $5 per person (fee waivers are available for those students receiving free or reduced lunch programs), including lunch and all materials. The conference is open to girls in grades 8-10 and their parents or other accompanying adults (male or female). Girls are welcome to attend with an adult other than their parent.

If your school is interested, you can arrange for group registration.
