Healthcare Leaders Join Brown University
Executive Master’s Advisory Committee

PROVIDENCE, R.I. [Brown University] -- Brown University’s School of Professional Studies named Donato Tramuto of Physicians Interactive, Chiledum Ahaghotu, MD, of Howard University, and Brian Napolitano of Massachusetts General Hospital as new members of the Executive Master of Healthcare Leadership (EMHL) advisory committee. The EMHL advisory committee comprises top-level professionals from healthcare industries, foundations, and academia who provide insight into the demands of the rapidly changing healthcare landscape to ensure that the program offers students broad business and industry knowledge, and develops in them the leadership skills necessary to lead the transformation of the healthcare industry.

Joining the EMHL advisory committee are:

Donato Tramuto, Founder, Chief Executive Officer and Chairman of Physicians Interactive, a leading provider of insight-driven digital engagement solutions for healthcare professionals and consumers. Mr. Tramuto is also founder of Health eVillages, a non-profit organization in partnership with Robert F. Kennedy Human Rights that brings state-of-the-art mobile technology with embedded, trusted medical content to the most remote areas of the world. He established the Ogunquit-based Tramuto Foundation, which distributes annual college scholarships in his home state of Maine, and financial grants for health, education and other non-profits. In 2014, Mr. Tramuto received the prestigious Robert F. Kennedy Human Rights Ripple of Hope Award, with other recipients Tony Bennett, Hillary Clinton and Robert De Niro, in recognition of his three decades of commitment to social change by advancing healthcare and human rights around the world.

Chiledum Ahaghotu, Associate Dean, Clinical Affairs and Chief of Urology at Howard University. During his 15 years as a faculty member at Howard, Dr. Ahaghotu has served in leadership roles including President of the Medical Staff of Howard University Hospital and Chairman of the Howard University Physician Advisory Council. He also held leadership positions in the American Urologic Association Health Policy Council, the National Medical Association, and the Society for Health Policy Committee. Dr. Ahaghotu received his MD from the University of Nigeria, MBA from Howard University, and EMHL from Brown University.

Brian Napolitano is Lead Medical Dosimetrist in the Department of Radiology Oncology at Massachusetts General Hospital. A member of the American Association of Medical Dosimetrists and the MGH Radiation Oncology Clinical Collaborative Committee, Mr. Napolitano is working to establish minimum practice standards in the field of medical dosimetry. in the face of potential government regulations. He also serves as an adjunct professor in the MGH/Suffolk University Joint Program in Medical Sciences. Mr Napolitano holds a BS from the State University of New York at Binghamton and an EMHL from Brown University.

“We are very pleased that these health leaders have made this commitment to the Executive Master of Healthcare Leadership program,” said Karen Sibley, Vice President for Strategic Initiatives and Dean of the School of Professional Studies at Brown University. “Their engagement with the EMHL faculty, students, and alumni will enrich the program and keep it at the cutting edge of executive education.”

The Executive Master of Healthcare Leadership program builds on Brown’s strength in public health and policy, health economics, and evidence-based medicine. This 16-month graduate program of blended online and residential learning focuses on the concerns of professionals in clinical care, hospital administration, insurance, biotech and pharmaceuticals, and legal, consulting and patient advocacy settings. Graduates are prepared to face the critical challenges in healthcare, to create better outcomes for patients, and to improve the financial health of their organizations.

Brown University is an independent, coeducational Ivy League institution that offers outstanding undergraduate and post-graduate programs. The Executive Master of Healthcare Leadership program is one of the executive programs offered by Brown’s School of Professional Studies for accomplished professionals who seek to advance their careers while leading and transforming their fields.

For more information on the Executive Master of Healthcare Leadership, visit www.brown.edu/executive.