ABOUT BROWN

Now celebrating the 250th anniversary of its founding, Brown has grown steadily, adding graduate courses in the 1880s, a women’s college in 1889 (the men’s and women’s undergraduate programs merged in 1971), a graduate school in 1927, the Alpert Medical School in 1973, the School of Engineering in 2010, and the School of Public Health in 2013. Brown’s international programs of research, instruction, and collaboration have expanded the University’s global reach. Recent Commencements have included families from more than 70 countries outside the United States.

During the first decade of the 21st century, Brown University made unprecedented investments in its academic programs. It expanded the faculty by 20 percent, added undergraduate seminars and research opportunities, enhanced support for graduate and medical education, instituted need-blind undergraduate admission, dramatically expanded its programs of undergraduate financial aid, added laboratory space and research support, renovated academic buildings, constructed new athletic facilities, and made plans to move its Alpert Medical School into new quarters in Providence’s Jewelry District.

In 2013, the University adopted Building on Distinction, a strategic plan to consolidate and continue that progress. Brown will devote more of its 146-acre historic campus on College Hill to research and undergraduate instruction and expand its campus beyond College Hill to include many administrative offices, medical education, and biomedical research.

VISITING BROWN

Directions
Construction projects in the city may require adjustments to the routes below.

From the north, south, or west: From either I-95 South or I-95 North, take Exit 22A, Downtown, Memorial Boulevard. At the fifth traffic light, turn left onto College Street. Cross the bridge and proceed up the hill following College Street to the end. At the top of the hill, where College Street intersects with Prospect Street, you will see Brown’s Van Wickle Gates. Turn left onto Prospect Street. At the next light, turn right onto Waterman Street. At the second light, turn right onto Brook Street. The visitor parking lot will be on your left immediately after turning onto Brook Street.

From the east: Follow I-195 West until exit 2, South Main Street. Travel down South Main Street to the first light. Turn right onto College Street. At the next stop sign, go straight up the hill. At the top of the hill, you will see Brown’s Van Wickle Gates. Turn left onto Prospect Street. At the next light, turn right onto Waterman Street. At the second light, turn right onto Brook Street. The visitor parking lot will be on your left immediately after turning onto Brook Street.

Campus tours
Led by undergraduate students, campus tours are popular introductions to Brown’s campus. Tours begin at the Stephen Robert ’62 Campus Center at 75 Waterman Street and last about an hour. Note that tours may not be available on holidays and when classes are not in session.

brown.edu/go/campustours
The original college building, completed in 1770, this brick structure houses the offices of Brown’s senior administration. It served as a dormitory through much of the 19th century. A straightforward American version of the English Georgian style, University Hall was modeled on Nassau Hall at Princeton. It is one of seven existing college buildings in the United States that predate the Revolution. In 1939 it underwent an extensive renovation and restoration, at which time it was discovered that only portions of the cupola and two large beams on the fourth floor were the original woodwork of the 1770s. The 300-pound bell within the cupola is the original.

The Warren Alpert Medical School of Brown University (E2)

The Warren Alpert Medical School of Brown University moved into its new home at 222 Richmond Street in August 2011. The 134,000 square-foot facility is a dramatic renovation of a 1928 jewelry factory, providing new lecture halls, case-study rooms, a bright well-ventilated anatomy lab and a 16-room “clinical simulation suite.” An electronic library connects to vast online resources.
The Perry and Marty Granoff Center for the Creative Arts (B4)
The Perry and Marty Granoff Center for the Creative Arts at Brown University is a 38,815 square-foot, three-story, interdisciplinary arts center at the heart of the College Hill campus, designed by Diller Scofidio + Renfro.

Manning Hall/Chapel (C3)
Standing between Hope College and University Hall on the College Green, Manning Hall was built in 1834 as a memorial to Brown’s first president, James Manning. Constructed of stone and stucco, it is an adaptation of 6th-century B.C. Greek Doric temples in Sicily and Paestum. The building houses the University’s 200-seat multi-faith chapel on the top floor and a satellite gallery of Brown’s Haffenreffer Museum of Anthropology on the lower level.

Robinson Hall
Built as the University’s library in 1878, this is a splendid Venetian-Gothic structure that includes a central rotunda with an octagonal cupola. The upper floors have balconies circling the rotunda. Whimsical carvings by James C. Brierly grace the exterior of Danvers pressed brick trimmed with sandstone. Renovated in 1989–90, the building houses the Department of Economics.

Slater Hall (C3)
Built in 1879 as the University’s second dormitory, Slater is a Ruskinian Gothic design by Stone and Carpenter. It remains one of Brown’s most popular residence halls. Horatio Nelson Slater, a longtime University supporter, pledged $25,000 for the building if Ezekiel Gilman Robinson would assume Brown’s presidency. (He did, in 1872.)
Sayles Hall (C4)
Sayles Hall, site of classes, concerts, parties, and lectures, is a memorial to William Clark Sayles, class of 1878, who died in his sophomore year. Completed in 1881, the building has a granite exterior inscribed Filio Pater Posuit and is trimmed in brownstone. At the east end of the high-ceilinged, wooden interior is a stage, backed by stained-glass windows; on the walls are pictures of past Brown presidents and other luminaries from the University’s history. Sayles Hall houses the largest Hutchings Votey pipe organ in the world.

Stephen Robert ’62 Campus Center (C3&4)
Dedicated in 1904, Faunce House originally was named Rockefeller Hall and extended only as far as Faunce Arch. The building was the gift of Brown parent John D. Rockefeller, who donated it “for the social and religious use of the University.” Designed by McKim, Mead, and White, its most distinctive feature is its great arched window. In the 1920s the building was expanded, thanks to a gift from John D. Rockefeller Jr., Brown class of 1897. Renovated in 2009 as Stephen Robert ’62 Campus Center.

The Aquatics and Fitness Center (B5)
Opened in 2012, the University’s new fitness complex comprises the Katherine Moran Coleman Aquatics Center, the Nelson Fitness Center, the David J. Zucconi ’55 Varsity Strength and Conditioning Center, and the Ittleson Quadrangle. The cupola, placed in storage when the University’s Marvel Gymnasium was demolished in 2002, provided a traditional finishing touch atop the Nelson Fitness Center.

Watson Institute for International Studies (D4)
Opened in early 2002, this 56,000-square-foot building houses the Thomas J. Watson Jr. Institute for International Studies. It was designed by internationally renowned architect Rafael Viñoly and includes 70 research offices, three classrooms, a television production studio, and state-of-the-art video-conferencing facilities.
Van Wickle Gates

Van Wickle Gates (C3)
The Van Wickle Gates, which face down College Hill toward Providence, were dedicated in 1901 after a bequest from Augustus Stout Van Wickle, class of 1876. A Brown student walks through the middle gates only twice: once when the gates open inward to admit new students, and once when the gates open outward to send graduates into the world beyond Brown.

Carrie Tower (C3)
Carrie Tower, which stands on the northwest corner of the front green at Waterman and Prospect streets, is a memorial to the granddaughter of Nicholas Brown, for whom the University is named. The tower was erected in 1904 by Carrie Brown’s husband, Paul Bajnotti, of Turin, Italy. Ninety-two feet tall, the tower is inscribed “Love is strong as death.”

Sidney E. Frank Hall for Life Sciences

Sidney E. Frank Hall for Life Sciences (B3)
The five-story Life Sciences Building, opened in 2006, is a $95 million research center housing more than 60 laboratories and state-of-the-art equipment. At 168,800 square feet, the building is Brown’s third largest after the Rockefeller Library and Barus and Holley.

Laboratories for Molecular Medicine (E1)
Brown University’s Laboratories for Molecular Medicine opened in August 2004. Once a watchband manufacturing building, the 105,000-square-foot space at 70 Ship Street was retrofitted to house 150 researchers, laboratory and administrative staff, and student research assistants.
John Hay Library (C3)
Named for a Brown alumnus who was Abraham Lincoln’s personal secretary and who later became Secretary of State, the John Hay Library was completed in 1910 as the University’s main library. Today it houses most of the University’s rare books, manuscripts, special collections, and archives.

John Carter Brown Library (C4)
The JCB Library was designed in 1904 by the firm of Shepley, Rutan, and Coolidge, and constructed of Indiana limestone. The library was built to house the priceless collection of books and maps dealing with the New World from its discovery through the 18th century, begun by John Carter Brown (1797–1874) and donated to the University by his son, John Nicholas Brown. The 15,000-square-foot Caspersen wing was added in 1990.

Smith-Buonanno Hall (B4)
The former Sayles Gymnasium on the Pembroke Campus received new life as the renovated and rechristened Smith-Buonanno Hall, opened in 2000. The building contains nine classrooms with room for about 400 students.

Watson Center for Information Technology (CIT) (C4)
The Thomas J. Watson Sr. Center for Information Technology, completed in 1988, is the home of Brown’s computer science department and a variety of classrooms and computing clusters for student use.
