Thutmose III’s conquest of the Levant
Royal women in the reign of Thutmose III
Merytre-Hatshepsut, great royal wife and mother of Amenhotep II

“Foreign princesses”
The damnatio memoriae of Hatshepsut by Thutmose III
The damnatio memoriae of Hatshepsut by Thutmose III

Evidence
→ cartouche erasure, replaced with Thutmoside name
→ image erasure, replaced by ritual object (offering table)
→ dumping of Deri el-Bahri statuary at nearby quarry

Initial conclusion:
“The determination with which [Thutmose III] later had the queen’s name hacked out from the walls of her temple at Deir el-Bahri allows us to suspect the humiliation he must have suffered during the reign of his ambitious stepmother.” (Mysliwiec 2000, 14)

“a woman of most vile character” (Gardiner 1961, 184)
The damnatio memoriae proscription of Hatshepsut by Thutmose III

Recent documentation
→ Iconoclasm no early than year 42 (Annals)
→ desecration of only kingly (male) representations
→ rarely is Thutmose III’s name carved in place of Hatshepsut’s (typically, Thutmose I or II)
→ Pylon VIII scenes of Thutmose III and Amunhotep II

Recent conclusions:
→ royal succession
→ dismantling of powerful female roles

Amenhotep II as warrior and diplomat

From the stela of Usersatet, Viceroy of Kush under Amenhotep II, at Semna

“Copy of an order which his Majesty made with his own two hands for the [king’s son Usersatet]... You sit... a brave one, who takes plunder from all lands, a chariot-soldier who fights for his Majesty, Amenhotep, who-rules-in Heliopolis... Naharin, who gives orders to the Hittite; the [possessor of a wo]man from Babylon, and a servant from Byblos, of a young maiden from Alalakh and an old lady from Arpakha.”

Reigns of Thutmose III and Amenhotep II
From the tomb of Amenemhab (TT85), Reign of Amenhotep II

“Lo, the king (T III) completed his lifetime of many years, splendid in valor, in might and in triumph from year 1 to year 54…He mounted to heaven, he joined the sun, the divine limbs mingling with him who begat him…When the morning brightened, the sun arose and the heavens shone. [Amenhotep II] was established upon the throne of his father; he assumed the royal titulary.

As for me, I was the very faithful [instrument] of the sovereign, the half of the heart of the king of the south, the light of the heart of the king of the north, while I followed my master in his expeditions to the regions of the north or of the south, [those which] he desired, for I was as the companion of his feet, and that in the midst of his valor and his power, in order to give testimony. Now I captured in the country of Nekeb, and brought back (certain) Asiatics, three men as prisoners, alive. When his majesty reached Naharain I brought thither the three men as booty, whom I placed before thy majesty, as living prisoners. Another time I captured (it was in the expedition to the country of mount Uan, to the west of Aleppo), and I brought back (certain) captured Asiatics, as living prisoners 13 men, 70 asses alive, 13 basins of iron /// basins of worked gold.

I traversed the water of Naharain without letting them escape, [and] I [set] them before my master. Behold, therefore, he rewarded me with a great reward…”

(and more victories and rewards follow)
Amenhotep II, Thutmose IV, Amenhotep III: managing an Empire – the military/diplomatic aspects

- No written treaties are attested for 18D, but some correspondence (late: Amarna letters)
- Exchange of gifts and envoys
- Diplomatic marriages (Amenhotep III to Gilu-Hepa)
- Royal children raised in Egyptian court
- Egyptian garrisons and officials in Syria-Palestine
- Vassal states send tribute
