Brown University offers study abroad options in England, Scotland and Wales – three countries that have a long and rich history layered with tradition, as well as many geographical differences. The cosmopolitan cities of London and Edinburgh are home to the English and the Scottish Parliaments, as well as being rich multicultural environments filled with marvelous museums, galleries, theaters, restaurants and historical sites. The cities of York, Glasgow, Manchester and Bristol combine the new and the old to create an exciting, dynamic environment. If you are looking for a campus-type university, Sussex and Lancaster may provide a more familiar setting. Studying abroad in Great Britain means exploration both on and off campus. A world-renowned public transportation system makes visits to the English countryside, the Scottish Highlands and the castles of Wales well within reach.

At a Glance

Program Dates Fall semester (early September – mid-December) or spring semester (early January – mid-June). Most British institutions offer study abroad for the fall or spring semester; however, some only offer a full academic year option. The academic year is divided into three terms lasting from October to mid-June. Because of this, students on fall-semester programs earn either three or four Brown course units, depending on the length of the term at the host institution.

Language of Instruction: English

Housing: University residence halls

Eligibility: Open to Brown undergraduate students.

Requirements: Junior-year status in good academic standing (a minimum 3.0 GPA or higher) and have a strong academic background in their fields of study (three to four courses previously taken in the field).

Visit brown.edu/oip for more information.