As women’s wages rise, domestic violence declines. Are the two related?

Is it better to prohibit addictive substances, or just tax and regulate them?

Why are some countries so much richer than others?

Why don’t more Americans believe in climate change?

Why do people pay double for name-brand aspirin?

Does immigration help or hurt the job opportunities of American workers?

Do suburbs make people gain weight? Do food stamps?

Is political discourse more polarized along party lines than it was in the past?

What role does racial prejudice play in our society?

Is globalization good or bad? For whom?

Which concentration asks the best questions?
Explore ECONOMICS

At Brown!

Courses offered include:

- Environmental Economics and Policy [ECON1350]
- Health, Hunger and the Household [ECON1530]
- Race and Inequality in the U.S. [ECON1370]
- Economics of Mass Media [ECON1400]
- Inequality of Opportunity [ECON1375]
- Behavioral Economics [ECON1820]
- International Trade [ECON1540]
- Game Theory [ECON1870]

AND MORE!

Come see an Economics Concentration Advisor

or shop Principles of Economics [ECON0110]

Email us at economics@brown.edu

Or visit the department website at http://www.brown.edu/academics/economics/

We look forward to seeing you soon!