Dear Professor Aizer,

The Consumer Financial Protection Bureau (CFPB) is recruiting this fall for the Director’s Financial Analyst position, and we want to encourage 2017 Economics graduates to apply.

This unique, two-year rotational fellowship, which will begin during the summer of 2017, sits at the intersection of the federal government and the financial services industry. The mission of the CFPB is to make markets for consumer financial products and services work for Americans, and to empower consumers to take more control of their economic lives. Fellows will contribute through data and policy analysis in rotation assignments, which range from cutting-edge economic research to developing tools to engage and educate consumers. The fellowship is a full-time position located at the CFPB’s headquarters in Washington, D.C and compensation is competitive with the private sector.

Previous Director’s Financial Analysts have used the program as a springboard to further their careers. Some graduates of the program have moved on to:

- Grad school (Columbia Economics, Harvard Business, Yale Law)
- Private industry (Amazon, Uber, Wells Fargo)
- Public sector (Department of the Treasury, NY Fed)

Students can apply for the program at www.consumerfinance.gov/jobs, the job will be open during two windows: September 16 – September 20 or October 13- October 17.

If you could pass this message along to interested students that would be great, they can reach out to me with any questions about the position and application process at Alanna.Williams@cfpb.gov.

Thank you,

Alanna Williams