Leela Gandhi is Professor of English at the University of Chicago. Her research and teaching focus on transnational literatures (particularly the legacies of colonial encounters between India and England), postcolonial theory, and intellectual history of the nineteenth and twentieth centuries. She received her B.A. from the University of Delhi, her M.Phil. and D.Phil. from Oxford University, and before coming to Chicago she taught at the University of Delhi and La Trobe University. Professor Gandhi is the author of many publications, including Postcolonial Theory: A Critical Introduction (1998), (co-authored) England in Twentieth-Century Fiction: Through Colonial Eyes (2001), and Affective Communities: Anticolonial Thought, Fin-de-Siècle Radicalism, and the Politics of Friendship (2006). Her new book, The Common Cause: Postcolonial Ethics and the Practice of Democracy, 1900-1955, is forthcoming from the University of Chicago Press.
