Isabel Hofmeyr is Professor of African Literature at the University of the Witwatersrand, Johannesburg. Her talk will be drawn from her new book, Gandhi's Printing Press: Experiments in Slow Reading (Harvard, 2013), which discusses Mahatma Gandhi’s practices of reading, writing, and publishing, situating them in both his Indian nationalist career and his early South African context.

Professor Hofmeyr is the author of The Portable Bunyan (Princeton, 2007) and We Spend our Years as a Tale that is Told: Oral Historical Narrative in a South African Chieftdom (Heinemann, 1994). Much of her recent work has focused on the Indian Ocean world, some of which has appeared in journals like “Public Culture,” “PMLA,” “Social Dynamics,” and “Comparative Studies of South Asia, Africa, and the Middle East.” Hofmeyr is based at the University of the Witwatersrand, where she is also associated with the Centre for Indian Studies in Africa, and she is currently Visiting Professor at New York University.
