Henry Turner, Associate Professor of English at Rutgers University, will present a talk entitled Universitas: On Corporations and Pluralism, 1516 - 2016. His talk examines the history of the "corporation" in 16th- and 17th-century England and the way it was taken up by literary writers, particularly More and Shakespeare. It considers the nature of corporate ontology and corporate personhood. The talk concludes by suggesting how a history of corporations could be generative for political theory, especially of a pluralist variety.

Monday, November 18, 2013
5:30 pm
Smith-Buonanno Hall, Room 106
95 Cushing Street
Reception to follow

This event is made possible by the Wetmore Fund for Literature.

www.brown.edu/english/events