

Yanick Lahens

Yanick Lahens is a major figure of Haitian literature. After attending university in France, she returned to Haiti, where she taught at the university in Port-au-Prince and worked for the Ministry of Culture. She is involved in numerous projects dedicated to the fight against illiteracy in Haiti, as well as the “Road to Slavery” project, focused on addressing the issue of slavery in Haiti through art and literature. Her fifth novel, Bain de lune (Moonbath), won the prestigious Prix Fémina in 2014.

MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 18

Lecture (in French)

“Bain de lune ou le rêve d’habiter”

6pm

Music Room, Rochambeau House/84 Prospect St.

Co-sponsored by the Cultural Services of the French Embassy

TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 19

Conversation and Q&A (in French)

11:30am

Birkelund Board Room (Room 140)

Watson Institute/111 Thayer St.

This event is open to all*

Coffee and brunch will be served*

Please RSVP by Tues. September 12 to rochambeausupport@brown.edu*

Co-sponsored by the Cultural Services of the French Embassy and the Center for Latin American and Caribbean Studies

at Brown

