Presentability:
The Appearing of Vanishing

How can one address the bare limit, a barrier of sorts, that precedes every presentation? How might one read the unapparent opening of appearance?

These and related questions, which the distinguished literary scholar Rainer Nägele pursues in his book from 2008, ‘Darstellbarkeit’ ('Presentability'), will be addressed at a symposium hosted by Brown’s Department of German Studies, following a keynote lecture by Nägele himself.

Friday, March 7 2014
Faculty Club, 1 Magee St., 8:45am – 5pm

Participants: Jason Groves (Yale), Michael Levine (Rutgers), Kristina Mendicino (Brown), Rainer Nägele (Yale), Gerhard Richter (Brown), Thomas Schestag (Brown), Zachary Sng (Brown)

Organized by: Kristina Mendicino

- Free and open to the public -