

Television, Race, and Re-Visioning the American Dream

Friday, December 4, 2015 9:45am - 5:00pm
Campus Center, Petteruti Lounge (Room 201)
75 Waterman Street, Providence RI

Presentations from

Matthew Delmont, Arizona State University
Ann duCille, Brown University
Bambi Haggins, Arizona State University
Darnell Hunt, UCLA
Roopali Mukherjee, CUNY-Queens College
Lynne Joyrich, Brown University
Pier Dominguez, Brown University
Majida Kargbo, Brown University
Brandy Monk-Payton, Brown University

From its inception, U.S. television has been invested in the "American Dream," deploying this dream in its marketing rhetoric, programming logics, and address to audiences. The American Dream has also been a powerful rallying call for mobilizing—as well as disavowing—racial struggle. What is the status of "the dream" today at a moment that has been proclaimed as both "post-televisual" and "post-racial"? This symposium will investigate these issues by exploring the fantasies and realities of TV, race, and America.

Free & open to the public. Complete presentation schedule: www.brown.edu/race

CSREA

CENTER FOR THE STUDY
OF RACE AND ETHNICITY
IN AMERICA

Cosponsored by The Malcom S. Forbes Center for Culture and Media • Department of Modern Culture and Media • American Studies • Pembroke Center for Teaching and Research on Women • Africana Studies • Department of English • Theater and Performance Studies • Cogut Center for the Humanities • Office of the Dean of the College