Engaging Adolescent Girls in Community-based HIV Prevention in South Africa

The Department of Behavioral and Social Sciences’ i-BSHS (Innovations in Behavioral and Social Health Sciences) lecture series fosters collaborative discussion on innovative behavioral and social science-based approaches to improving population health.

Abigail Harrison, PhD is Assistant Professor (Research) of Behavioral and Social Sciences, Brown School of Public Health. She is also affiliated with the International Health Institute and the Population Studies and Training Center. Harrison’s research addresses young women, HIV/AIDS, and reproductive health in sub-Saharan Africa, with specific attention to the social dynamics of adolescent risk and women’s reproductive decision-making.

Continue the conversation with our speaker over a light lunch immediately following the talk in room 247.
