WHY DO YOU NEED TO KNOW ABOUT OSP?

As you develop your research at Brown University it is important to know the offices on campus who are here to help facilitate your research from concept to project completion.

Please visit our website at the link below to find out more about the proposal and award life cycle and the role OSP will play in facilitating this process.

What Do We Do?

The Office of Sponsored Projects (OSP) supports Brown University faculty, students, and staff in the acquisition, performance, and administration of projects and programs funded by external sources. OSP provides the University's central coordination and oversight of research by offering a wide range of services including review and submission of proposals; award negotiation and acceptance; dissemination of research policy information to campus; issuance of subaward agreements and subrecipient monitoring; compliance with governmental and private funding agency standards; advising on financial management of sponsored projects, financial and expense reporting; cash management; effort reporting, and monitoring of cost-share arrangements; addressing financial and administrative issues that arise during the life of a sponsored project; coordination of award close-out process; and providing education and professional development opportunities in research administration for the campus community.
